La Alianza para el Gobierno Abierto (AGA) / Open Government Partnership (OGP) is an international multi-stakeholder initiative that aims to secure concrete commitments from governments to promote transparency, empower citizens, fight corruption, and harness new technologies to strengthen governance. To participate in OGP, countries must endorse a high-level Open Government Declaration, deliver a National Action Plan developed with public consultation with civil society, and commit to independent reporting on their progress.

PLAN NACIONAL DE DESARROLLO CONSTRUYENDO EL PARAGUAY DEL 2030

The National Development Plan Paraguay 2030 (PND 2030) approved by Decree No. 2,794 / 2014 establishes the Transversal Line for “efficient and transparent governance”. Within it, it recognizes the “Open Government Action Plans” as a tool to strengthen the implementation process towards an increasingly open and transparent government.

PND Paraguay 2030 is a strategic document that facilitates coordinating actions into sectorial bodies of executive branch, as well as various levels of government, civil society, private sector and eventually the Legislative and Judicial branches. It is an instrument to fulfill the constitutional mandate established in Article 177, which states that national development plans will be indicative for the private sector, and mandatory for compliance for the public sector. The same was the product of an extensive consultation process started in November 2013 with more than 2,000 references in all sectors and regions.

As established in the PND 2030, an efficient and transparent public management involves satisfying the needs of the population, coordinating functional areas to eliminate the fragmentation of tasks, optimizing resources, providing accurate information of all acts of public management for interest to the society. It means orienting public management to results for citizens, ensuring a Solidarity State, guarantor of rights, open, without discriminations and without tolerance towards corruption. It will reduce corruption by clarifying the rules, improving transparency and control mechanisms of the State, and increasing the participation of beneficiaries and users in monitoring programs of the different levels of government.

In January 2016, Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development (SDG 2030) came into force and marked the beginning of the challenge of 15 years to effectively implement 17 ambitious goals that seek, among others, ending extreme poverty and hunger; improve the quality of health and education; and reduce environmental impact

Paraguay and several OGP member countries pledged to use the National Action Plans to adopt commitments that serve as effective tools to promote transparent and accountable implementation of the Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development.

1. INTRODUCTION

Open Government (OG) is a form of relationship between government and citizens; supported by permanent participation and collaboration of its members in the practice of citizens' rights and fulfillment of obligations.

This third National Action Plan that presents Paraguay to OGP is evidence of how the government is committed to the principles of citizen participation, accountability and transparency. And at the same time it is a challenge that seeks to deepen the opportunities for collaboration and opening of information.

For this Plan, on the basis of the assessments made and the great challenges of OGP, the main challenges faced were:

1. Improve the quality of life of people linking the Open Government Action Plan with the National Development Plan Paraguay 2030 (NDP 2030) and the Sustainable Development Goals 2030 (SDG 2030);
2. Increase the involvement of civil society in the process of co-creation and strengthen the principle of citizen participation in all commitments of the Plan; and
3. Include commitments involving government institutions outside the executive branch and subnational governments.

The Plan was co-created with the participation of 62 civil society organizations, academics, international organizations and working groups; and 47 public institutions. The methodology used in promoted citizen participation and enabled the construction of consensus among the participants in the 8 thematic groups and 15 work sessions. In addition, seeking to improve and ensure the participation of different stakeholders, it was made a wide dissemination of the call, which included several complementary modalities. Throughout the process 609 people participated.

For the elaboration of the commitments 8 groups were organized, in which each of them covered a single theme. These groups were: poverty reduction and social development; education; Health; environment and natural resources; citizen security and comptrollership; access to public information, open data and transparency; continuity of action plans; and inclusion of new stakeholders. Also for the organization of the call, taking into account the specificity of the tables, a map of actors was elaborated to help that in each table were key representatives of civil society of each theme, public institutions and public in general. In each case, rigor invitations were made and in sufficient time to ensure the presence of the largest number of participants. All groups had key players from both civil society and the state and were opened and advertised for participation of citizens in general.

The consensus reached in each group were materialized in commitments, shared and put to consultation of participants, citizens in general through different broadcast channels used and referred to the Open Government Forum for review. It formed an Evaluation Committee that reviewed the commitments and made suggestions for improvements that were incorporated by the institutions responsible in each of the 10 commitments and 62 agreed goals.

2. OPEN GOVERNMENT EFFORTS TO DATE

Open Government values converge with the development goals of the Paraguay Government because: 1. They increase the level of confidence of stakeholders and local and international investors, 2- Improve the organization of the State as encourage and promote communication and participation with citizens for information to flow more efficiently and; 3- most importantly, they create an open culture for participation between different levels of government and society.

In this line, the Paraguay was established as a member of the OGP, understanding that this reinforces the commitment derived from the principles enshrined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the UN Convention against Corruption, the Inter-American Convention against corruption and other international instruments related to human rights and good governance.

The First National Action Plan 2012 introduced 15 commitments. This Plan was evaluated by the Independent Review Mechanism (IRM) considering that the commitments are relevant to the values of the OGP, having a moderate or transformative potential impact, and have a level of substantive or full compliance. Of the 15 assumed commitments, 3 met the above criteria: a) information exchange system between government institutions (SII) through a software application that enables the exchange of information between government institutions; b) Purchasing System by electronic catalog, strengthening the national public procurement system; c) Integrated Control System of administrative career (SICCA) for people management and development of a Single Portal of Public Employment “Paraguay Concursa”.

For the Second National Action Plan 2014-2016, nine commitments were elaborated assumed by 12 institutions and counted in its creation with the participation of nine civil society organizations. The Independent Review Mechanism, in its Progress Report 2014-2015, stands out with moderate or transformer potential impact and relevant, to the values of OGP to the following commitments:

Enactment and implementation of the Law on Access to Public Information.

Law No. 5282/2014 of Free Citizen Access to Public Information and Governmental Transparency and Decree No. 4064/2015 guarantees the effective exercise of the right of public information access through the implementation of the modalities, deadlines, exceptions and corresponding sanctions. Offices for Access to Public Information were created and are functioning in different institutions. In addition, a website for Access to Public Information (www.informacionpublica.gov.py) centralizes, at the time, more than 1,300 access applications of 70 government institutions attached to the website. The law sparked corruption and nepotism in all levels and branches of government. This process was named by the press as the “informative spring.”

Design and implementation of a policy of open data and promotion of capacity building in civil society for its use.

The website of open data catalog (www.datos.gov.py) allows any citizen, institutions, companies and employees, to have simple, free and dynamic access to government open data sets. Relevant data sets of education, health, hiring, housing, culture and finances were made available. Courses and hackathons promoted the use of data and developed applications, for example, to control the use of public resources to improve the infrastructure of educational institutions (Controller FONACIDE), public procurement (Contrataciones PY), health services and medicines (akuerapp) and services linked to justice (Guía Legal).

Generating citizenship capacity on budgetary management in the public sector.

Campaigns, workshops and materials allowed explaining in a clear accessible language the proposal of the Executive branch of the General Budget of the Nation and created sites for public to access to budget information.

Transparency and Access to emblematic public projects Information.

We worked on a detailed access to online emblematic projects information such as Law No. 5102/13, “Promotion of Investment in Public Infrastructure and expansion and improvement of Goods and Services in charge of the State”; Project for Sustainable Rural Development (PRODERS) and the Master Plan of the Historic Downtown Asuncion (CHA Plan).

Implementation of social dialogue channels and citizen participation for consultation and monitoring of public policies.

National Strategy Country Team (ENEP) was institutionalized as a consultative and advisory body of the Executive Branch by Decree No. 1732/2014. Composed of representatives of government and social, business, cooperatives, scientific, academic and cultural areas, the ENEP was an active participant in the construction of the National Development Plan Paraguay 2030 (NDP 2030) and supports installation, communication, ownership and implementation in various sectors of society, in order to make state policy with short-, medium- and long-term objectives. Consultative Tables were also created for public/private nature of culture, water and nutrition.

Creation and / or strengthening of 50 Municipal Development Councils.

At the time, more than 100 Municipal Development Councils were institutionalized on a universe of 250 municipalities in the country. Councils are instance of citizen participation where interaction with the public, private sectors and civil society is established; and coordinate, articulate and implement joint actions to benefit the community. The site manages to incorporate the approach of including all local stakeholders and transpires public management through the participation of its members. They have been working on the development and monitoring of Municipal Development Plans.

Creating a Legal Procedures Electronic System in Public Procurement for public access.

Legal Procedures electronic system is already part of Public Procurement website (www.contrataciones.gov.py) and enables the submission of objections by electronic means, allowing the public to know the substantiation process of the protest, the parties involved and the results.

Mesa Conjunta de Gobierno Abierto / Open Government Forum

For the purposes of the Open Government Partnership, the Ministry of Planning for Economic and Social Development under the President of the Republic (STP) is a public institution that has the representation of Paraguay before OGP and is the institution responsible to promote the principles of Open Government in the country. In addition, it is responsible for ensuring that government organizations and civil society participate in the design, implementation and monitoring of the Open Government National Action Plans in Paraguay.

Open Government Forum is a platform for permanent dialogue created during the second action plan where the Civil Society and the State take decisions on Open Government Action Plans and watch and follow the fulfillment of the commitments submitted. This joint responsibility between governmental and non-governmental entities allows the opportunity to promote the development of an Open Government National Strategy to ensure that commitments do not become in isolated and unrelated efforts to each other, thus institutionalizing the processes of Open Government in Paraguay.

The meetings of the Open Government Forum regularly conducted at least quarterly, they are open to the public and are broadcasted live via streaming. In addition, a Control Panel allows the government, civil society organizations and citizens to follow the progress of plans permanently. All news and activities are promoted through the web www.gobiernoabierto.gov.py; social networks “Open Government Paraguay” on Facebook, Twitter and YouTube; awareness events across the country; and, recently, a weekly television program on “Paraguay TV” called #GobiernoAbiertoPy.

3. DEVELOPMENT PROCESS OF NATIONAL ACTION PLAN

The design of co-creation process of the Plan was structured on the basis of OGP methodological guidelines responding to the need to convene and ensure the effective participation of citizens in the process through performing a wide public consultation about commitments to be presented, as well as promoting participation in different sites and giving the opportunity to participate through various channels.

Co-Creation Timeline and Launching of the Process

At the meeting of the Open Government Forum performed on November 5, 2015, the timeline on the basis of three stages was agreed; in the first stage preliminary tasks and organization of works for the design of the Plan were developed by defining a co-creation timeline that enables the previous notice and the promotion due to the activities, it was also included the conducting of an National OG Seminar as official launch of the process on November 17, 2015 and participation in related events¹, seeking awareness and inclusion of new actors in the process of co-creation. The second stage of initial development of commitments, was to conduct a broad public call for participation in the process of co-creation and conducting working sessions organized in 8 clusters. Finally, in the third stage an Evaluation Committee was established, at the request of the Open Government Forum, which had the task of prioritization and definition of commitments to be included in the Plan. The process had the support of the USAID Democracy and Governance Program implemented by CEAMSO.

Initial development of commitments

In order for preparation of the commitments to fulfill the outlined criteria mentioned above, 8 groups were organized, each of which covered a single theme. These groups were: poverty reduction and social development; education; Health; environment and natural resources; security and citizen comptrollership; access to public information, open data and transparency; continuity of action plans; and a workshop for the inclusion of new actors.

The organization of the groups had as a priority the participation of citizens, and the used methodology focused on building of consensus among various participants. Seeking the possibility of developing specific thematic agreements, within the framework of a participatory and democratic process, and capable of become in commitments and specific targets for a period no longer than two years.

In order to organize the call and taking into account the specialty of the groups, a strategy of segmentation and classification² was used, drawing a map of actors that helped to have key civil society representatives of each topic, public institutions and citizens in general. In each case the rigor invitations were made and in sufficient time to ensure the presence of the largest number of participants. All groups had key players from both civil society and the state.

On January 19, during the first meeting of the Forum, the working groups, the co-creation plan and methodology were presented. With the approval granted by the Forum, the working meetings began.

Working Groups

Participants

15 sessions of the various groups were developed, about eight specific themes and involving 47 public institutions, 62 civil society organizations, academic sector, agencies and international working groups.

The working groups met in two sessions for each subject. For the integration of each, calls were made addressed to institutional referents of civil society, unions and academia according to the mapping of actors performed were performed; and a public call for the general public, spread by social networks (Facebook and Twitter), Open Government website, press releases in mass media (print, television and radio media), alternative media, and emails lists. Also the information generated was replicated through the websites and social networks of public institutions and civil society organizations. Thus, each cluster was composed of the main actors.

² Previously it was made an ordering of civil society organizations according to the themes that each operates.

The first sessions of the working groups, carried out between February and March were organized in three parts. In the first part, state institutions presented progress and ideas, in the second part, the civil society organizations made presentations on specific demands that could be incorporated by the institutions to their commitments. Later exchange sites were opened where all participants from among public sector, civil society and citizens in general, from their own sectoral experiences, made contributions to enrich or supplement the submitted proposals. In most cases specific demands were made included by the institutions.

The working sessions were transmitted live via streaming, systematized in a document³ and made available to attendants and people in general through the OG web (<http://www.gobiernoabierto.gov.py/plan2016-18>). Likewise, news, photos and the main opinions and ideas expressed by the participants were also published. Prior to conducting the meetings a presentation scheme was distributed that arranged the exposures of each institution and / or participant.

For the second session, held between March and April, and with the systemized contributions of the first session as inputs, public institutions elaborated their commitment templates. These were presented and discussed with all participants involved. Later, after feedback, the institutions took time to incorporate improvements of its final draft of commitments, for referral to the Open Government Forum.

During the co-creation, the citizens contributed ideas and comments through a web site provided for the purpose and templates delivered during awareness events. They were taken into consideration for the formulation and evaluation of commitments.

The Evaluation Committee was formed through a process of voluntary application of the attendants, in which it was appointed by consensus to five members of public institutions and five members of society organizations, who were responsible for the comprehensive review of commitment templates.

The Evaluation Committee⁵ met on three occasions. The first two sessions were aimed at assessing the commitments submitted under the Evaluation Grid⁶ and subsequent return to the institutions for inclusion of the made recommendations. Evaluation grids and recommendations were published to public in general through an Open Government Site. Also, a tour of the cities of Caacupé and Ciudad del Este⁷ was conducted to raise awareness about the Open Government initiative and share publicly a draft of the Plan.

Again, institutions made corresponding improvements and were returned to the Evaluation Committee for prioritization and final ordering. In this context, the Committee re-grouped templates and initial goals in 10 commitments and 62 goals, and they were ready for public consultation online. Finally, on June 21st, the Plan was presented to the Open Government Forum for final approval and referral to the corresponding authorities.

Access to Public Information

Higher level of appropriation of the Law of AIP and of the principles of open government to improve quality of life.

COMMITMENT 1

Status quo or problem addressed	The Law on Access to Public Information in Paraguay entered into force in September 2015. This fact, although it is a major step forward in itself does not guarantee the access to the information because the actors of civil society and the people in general are not aware of this law and there is no tradition of requests for information to the State. The current reality is that the people still do not have access to the information they need to assert their rights and to monitor the public sector, in part due to the lack of availability of information and in part because of ignorance of existing mechanisms. Also the principles of open government need greater ownership by the actors.
Main Objective	Achieve the citizen empowerment and key actors of civil society through the promotion, dissemination and exercise of the right of access to Public Information (AIP), contributing to the progressive implementation of the law N° 5282/14 “free citizen access to public information and transparency of government” and the citizen participation, accountability and transparency through the promotion of open government.
Brief description of the Commitment	Perform activities that promote, disseminate and facilitate the exercise of the right of AIP, the Law of AIP and open government with civil society and public officials.
OGP challenges addressed	1. Improvement of public services 2. Increase of Public Integrity 3. Effective management of public resources
Relevance	The increase of the publicly available information will contribute to the development of an institutional culture of transparency and accountability on the part of the Government. And contribute to the participation of citizenship and the social monitoring.
Ambition	A proper implementation of the law on access to public information that includes on the one hand, wide dissemination of the law, the form of exercising the right, its importance as a means to access other fundamental rights, and, on the other, the progressive increase of the minimum information available obligatorily in the institutional websites and higher percentage of responses to requests for information in a timely manner, in addition to the promotion of the principles of open government will contribute to reducing the asymmetries of information in order to achieve more inclusive institutions and citizens more empowered.

Open Data

Continued implementation of a policy of open data and promotion of the generation of capacities in civil society for its use

COMMITMENT 2

Status quo or problem addressed	Paraguay is in a process of opening up public data from two years ago. This process is still half way; on the one hand, there are few institutions that have opened their databases and have published in the portal of open data. On the other hand, is still limited the use - and is unknown in part the level of use - in the data that have been opened by the State. Nor have prioritized the data sets made available according to the needs of civil society.
Main Objective	Put at the disposal of the citizenship greater amount of relevant data in the catalog, prioritized by public consultation; and promote its use through activities of dissemination and Hackatones.
Brief description of the Commitment	Opening of new catalogs of data prioritized, under public consultation, in institutions of the State and promotion of the open data.
OGP challenges addressed	1. Improvement of public services 2. Increase of Public Integrity 3. Effective management of public resources
Relevance	The regular updating of information on open formats will contribute to improve the collaborative participation of civil society and install a culture of public transparency.
Ambition	The Decree that regulates Law No. 5282/14 "free citizen access to public information and transparency of government" (Act of AIP) establishes that the public information available to the Government must be transformed progressively to open data format. The increase of the data sets available in open formats, in particular wage policies, selection of public servants, data of elections, political parties, culture, industry, commerce, public tenders, as well as the promotion and training for the use of the data will allow you to raise awareness and empower the population on the usefulness of the open data to improve the access to rights.
Strategic objectives of the PND 2030 / Objectives of Sustainable Development 2030	21. Increase the proportion of public officials incorporated or promoted with criteria of merit and skills / ODS16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions 22. Increase the access to public information and formalities by means of electronic networks / ODS16 Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions 47.
